

Satellite radio is one of the most valuable things I have when on the road. I can drive long distances knowing I will have updated local weather and news. This service extends across the entire US. Satellite radio, and XM Radio in particular, should be allowed to continue the fine services it already offers, and rather than trying to curtail satellite radio's features, Congress should be supporting such a nationwide, affordable service; one which contributes to the safety and well-being of millions of listeners.
